Western Forest Products®

Accelerating the transition to higher value products

At Western Forest Products, we are accelerating the expansion of our higher-value product lines, making strategic investment decisions and leveraging a local skilled workforce to make the most of the unique and valuable forest resource we have the privilege of stewarding

Strategic Considerations

Global demand for wood products will continue to grow, especially value-added products

Western has a unique fibre advantage: diverse and high-quality species

Focusing on higher value products over the long term will require targeted investment in our manufacturing, planing and drying

Though operationally complex and high-cost jurisdictions, the coastal forests where Western operates are healthy and growing

Advancing reconciliation through collaboration and joint partnerships with First Nations is a core part of our business

Fibre profile in coastal forests is shifting from larger logs to smaller second growth logs

Our five-year vision is to modernize our primary manufacturing foundation and accelerate a shift to a higher value product mix.

1

Increase kiln drying capacity to ensure that our products meet internal value-added needs and customer expectations, and provide flexibility to respond to shifting market demands

2

Modernize and reposition our primary manufacturing facilities to align better with our long-term wood supply

3

Expand our remanufacturing capacity to improve fibre utilization and add value to lower grades that attracts mutually beneficial partnerships to grow domestic demand

4

Expand through acquisition and internal growth, including leveraging our specialty glulam business

5

Continue to invest in people to bring our vision to life with the skillsets to operate primary and secondary facilities and create and sustain global markets for our value-added products
