2. POLICY

General Disclosure Principles

- 2.01 As a reporting issuer, the Company is required to disclose material information in a timely manner, subject to certain exceptions.
- 2.02 Material information includes material facts and material changes that would reasonably be expected to have a significant effect on the market price or value of the Company's securities. Material information may include facts or changes that are proposed but not yet final. Examples of potentially material information include: major reorganizations, amalgamations or mergers; changes in the Company's dividend payments or policies; planned repurchases or redemptions of all or part of the Company's securities; unexpected changes in the financial results of the Company for any periods, changes in the value or composition of the Company's assets; a significant change in capital investment plans or corporate objectives; significant new contracts; major labour disputes or significant disputes with major contractors or suppliers; and significant acquisitions or dispositions of assets, property or joint venture interests. The foregoing is not an exhaustive list of the types of events or information that may be material. In assessing the materiality of information, the Company will consider the nature of the information itself, the potential impact on the market price of the Company's securities and prevailing market conditions.
- 2.03 In complying with its disclosure requirements, the Company will be guided by the following basic disclosure principles:

- (a) Disclosure will include all material information, including any information that if omitted would make the rest of the disclosure misleading.
- (b) Disclosure will provide sufficient detail to permit investors to appreciate the substance and importance of the information.
- (c) Disclosure will be factual and balanced, neither over-emphasizing favourable news, nor under-emphasizing unfavourable news. Unfavourable news will be disclosed just as promptly and completely as favourable news.
- (d) Selective disclosure is not acceptable. If previously undisclosed material information has been inadvertently disclosed to any person who is not bound by an express confidentiality obligation, such information will be broadly disclosed via news release.

Maintaining Confidentiality

- 2.04 Any director, officer or employee privy to confidential information is prohibited from communicating such information to anyone else, unless it is necessary to do so in the ordinary course of business. Confidential information is information about the Company and its subsidiaries (including, but not limited to, material information) that has not been generally disclosed to the public.
- 2.05 In order to prevent the misuse or inadvertent disclosure of confidential information, the following procedures should be observed at all times:
- (a) Documents and files containing confidential information should be kept in a safe and restricted place.
 - (b) Confidential information should not be discussed in places where the discussion could be overheard, such as elevators, taxis or restaurants.
 - (c) Unnecessary copying of documents containing confidential information must be avoided, and extra copies of documents must be promptly removed from meeting rooms and work areas at the conclusion of the meeting and destroyed if no longer required.
 - (d) Confidential documents should not be read or displayed in places where members of the public are present.
 - (e) Confidential documents must be discarded in a manner that maintains confidentiality of the document (i.e. destroyed).
 - (f) Confidentiality must be maintained inside and outside of the office.
 - (g) Transmission of documents by electronic means should be made only where it is reasonable to believe that the transmission can be made and received under secure conditions. Where practicable, employees should avoid using e-mail to transmit confidential information.
- 2.06 Undisclosed material information shall not be disclosed to anyone unless it is necessary to do so in the ordinary course of business and the person receiving such information clearly understands that it is to be kept confidential, and, in appropriate circumstances, executes a confidentiality agreement. If an employee is in doubt as to whether communication is in the ordinary course of business, the employee should discuss it with a member of the Committee.

All such inquiries shall be referred to one of the designated spokespersons.

Conference Calls

4.12 Management may hold conference calls to discuss quarterly earnings and major corporate developments. Such conference calls must be simultaneously accessible to all interested parties by telephone or via a webcast over the Internet. "It is our policy not to comment on market rumours or speculation."

Should the TSX or IIROC, request that the Company make a definitive statement in response to a market rumour that is causing significant volatility in the shares of the Company, the CFO or an individual designated by the CFO will consider the matter and decide whether to make a Policy exception.

4.16 Meetings with analysts and significant investors are an important element of the Company's investor relations program. The Company will meet with analysts and investors on an individual or small group basis as needed, and will initiate or respond to analyst and investor calls in accordance with this Policy.

If selective disclosure of previously undisclosed material information occurs during such interactions, then appropriate action should be taken under the guidance of the Committee.

Reviewing Analyst Draft Reports and Models

- 4.21 The Company will review draft analyst reports or top-level financial models for the purpose of correcting factual errors based on publicly disclosed information. It is the Company's policy, when an analyst inquires with respect to his/her estimates, to question an analyst's assumptions if the estimate is a significant outlier among the range of estimates and/or the Company's published earnings guidance. The Company will limit its comments in responding to such inquiries to non-material or generally disclosed information. The Company will not confirm, or attempt to influence, an analyst's opinions or conclusions and will not express comfort with the analyst's model and earnings estimates.

Distributing Analyst Reports

- 4.22 Analyst reports are proprietary products of the analyst's firm. Re-circulating a report by an analyst may be viewed as an endorsement by the Company of the report. - 4.23 The Company may post on its website a complete list, regardless of the recommendation, of all the investment firms and analysts who are known to the Company to provide research coverage on the Company. If provided, such list will not include links to the analysts' or any other third-party websites or publications.

During quiet periods the Company's communications with analysts, investors and other market professionals should be limited to responding to unsolicited inquiries concerning factual matters, and no earnings guidance or comments with respect to the Company's expected results or operations for such quarter will be provided. Notwithstanding the foregoing, the Company may participate in investment meetings and conferences organized by third parties provided that there is no disclosure of material information that is not generally disclosed, and that caution is exercised to prevent selective disclosure.

The Company will maintain a log indicating the date that material information is posted and/or removed from the investor relations website. Removal of material corporate information from the website will require approval of the Committee.
- 4.31 Disclosure on the Company's website alone does not constitute adequate disclosure of information that is considered material non-public information. Any disclosures of material information on the website will be preceded by the issuance of a news release.
- 4.32 Responses to electronic inquiries will be provided as appropriate. Only public information or information that could otherwise be disclosed in accordance with this Policy will be utilized in responding to electronic inquiries.
